Terrin Griffiths, Samuel Inman Join Credit Union Economics Group

WASHINGTON – Two highly regarded credit union industry financial professionals are the newest members of the Credit Union Economics Group.

Terrin Griffiths, economist and industry analyst for the California/Nevada Credit Union Leagues and Samuel Inman, chief financial officer of Community First Credit Union of Florida, have joined CUEG, an independent group of credit union officials dedicated to the financial well-being of the credit union movement.

“CUEG is pleased to welcome two very qualified industry professionals in Terrin and Samuel,” said Tun Wai, Director/Research and Chief Economist, NAFCU. “Credit unions need economic and financial information on local and regional levels. Terrin and Samuel represent different regions of the country and will provide important perspective and expertise for the group and for the credit union community.”

In her role with the California/Nevada League, Griffiths’ primary responsibilities include keeping League membership informed economic issues and how they could impact credit unions’ business goals. She also compiles and analyzes industry data for use by credit union executives in their business decisions and by lobbyists in their advocacy efforts.

Prior to joining the League, Griffiths worked as a senior field economist for the U.S. Dept. of Labor. She has a master’s degree in economics and a bachelor’s degree in mathematics, statistics and economics from California State University, Long Beach.

Inman is responsible for the overall financial condition of Community First Credit Union of Florida, Jacksonville, and developing and implementing long-term strategies, policies and operating objectives. He serves on the Board of the Florida CFO Council and Florida CUES Board of Directors.
